

Dementia: Understand Together

On Thursday, October 26th, television audiences will be introduced to two families living with dementia. In new TV adverts from the HSE led Dementia: Understand Together campaign, Maureen O'Hara and Paddy Butler have generously welcomed us into their homes, and told us of their experience of dementia. They also show how, together with the support of their families, friends, and community, they are able to live well with dementia.

Maureen, Paddy, and everyone connected to Dementia: Understand Together, are asking Irish people to know more, to understand better, to maintain friendships, to keep in touch – to stand together with the half a million people affected by dementia.

Minister for Health, Simon Harris TD will officially launch this new phase of the Dementia: Understand Together campaign on:

Date: Thursday 26th October.

Time: 10.45am for refreshments with 11.15am start.

Venue: The Lecture Theatre, National Gallery of Ireland, Merrion Square, Dublin 2.

We would like to invite you to attend.

Please RSVP to Lynda.murphy@hse.ie or call 01 635 2180.

Travelling to the National Gallery of Ireland:

Please use public transport where possible. Access to the National Gallery of Ireland is by the Merrion Square entrance. Lifts are available for people with limited mobility. There are public car parks close by around Merrion Square.
